Workshop: "Difficult Conversations"

Three Saturdays: February 6, 13, and 20

Based on his book, Difficult Conversations: The Art and Science of Working Together, Kern Beare is donating this three-part workshop as a fundraiser for the Center on from 9:30 to 11:30 am, with an extra half hour at the end of the first meeting.

The workshop combines insights into contemporary neurophysiology, self-reflection, self-inquiry, and the opportunity to tell and listen to each other's stories. There are also practical guidelines for turning difficult conversations into meaningful opportunities to get what matters.

- Gain a deeper understanding of the dynamics that turn conversations into conflicts.
- Discover how one critical shift in thinking can turn a negative interaction into a creative and constructive engagement.
- Understand how our personal story can be a tool to both build bridges and burn them.
- Learn how to look "beyond" our personal story to access more easily and deeply our innate capacity for connection, creativity, and collaboration.

The workshop is limited to 40 participants. Click here to register. To learn more about Kern Beare and to order his book, go to <https://difficultconversationsproject.org/>

Lunchtime Learning: The Book of Soul

The Book of Soul, by Mark Nepo, is an antidote to those times when we want to slip into resignation, isolation, or despair. The bestselling author writes about staying connected to our deeper purpose as we rush through our days and about honoring and surrendering to what is sacred, pure, and often confounding but always true about being human. Join Community Minister Tara Steele on Wednesdays in January from 12 noon to 1 pm to discuss some of the ideas in this book. This is a free, drop-in event. You don't need to sign up in advance.
